The Singapore River, which flows through the city's congested Central Business District, is inextricably linked to Singapore's history and contemporary day life. Stamford Raffles originally arrived on the north side of the river to establish his colony, and several government buildings still along its banks. Many of the city's biggest nightlife hotspots, including Boat Quay, Clarke Quay, and Robertson Quay, are also located along the river. This tour will be going back in time to witness how Singapore's lifeline has changed through time as the country has progressed.
